FIGHT PESTS THE AIM OF CIVIC SOCIETY.

BOARDS, SMOKY CHIMNEYS HOUSE FLY AND TETANUS UNDER THE BAN.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22—Billboards, smoky chimneys, the house fly and the Fourth of July tetanus germ, are some of the pests which the American Civic Federation hopes to abolish, and to that end nationally known workers have been secured in each city and an altruistic campaign will be launched in earnest next week when the association's secretary, Richard B. Watrous, who has been placed in charge of legislation which he thinks of much public interest. One of the things aimed at is the creation of a national park at Niagara Falls.

President Taft put the seal of his approval on the policies of the American Civic Association by becoming a member of it when he was secretary of war.

Thousands of good citizens in all parts of the United States have united in the commenced movement to call on Congress the enactment of legislation which will eventually result in making both town and country more desirable places to live in. The cultivation of higher ideals of civic life and beauty, the promotion of city and town and neighborhood improvement and the preservation and development of landscape and the advancement of the outdoor art, are among the specific objects which the association hopes to attain.

The regulation of billboards and the abatement of the smoke nuisance are a part of the association's program, and while it is deeply interested in the comprehensive plans of cities, it is not above waging war on that disease carrying pest, the house fly. The association has already taken a campaign for a "safe and sane" Fourth and of civic education through churches and the public schools.

One of Daytona's crowning glories is her incomparable beach. No one who ever set foot upon its smooth, packed sands; no one who ever pedaled a bicycle over its expanse; no one who ever drove a prancing pair of horses and listened to the popping of their steel shoes upon its asphaltum-like face; no one who ever steered a high-power automobile down the broad stretch of water-washed and surf-packed sand but realized that it is a world-beater, a world-wonder. Go stand upon this wide speedway and see the happy souls flit by in joyous mood, and answer whether this is not one of the seven modern wonders.

The Picnic Peninsula Halifax River.

Where think you is water with more picturesque surroundings? Nearly a mile wide, fringed with tropical vegetation, artistic cottages with fronts terraces leading out upon her bosom, dainty boat-lakes—as it were, to tether the rich and poor. Her bosom flecked with dark and cool and sunny waters, which at about as if for the sport of bobbing upon the waves, watch that tuberosity and white headed pelican poach a fat skillet and that fish hawk streaking upward with his floundering load to disappear from the water?

And the beautiful shoreline, with its rich verdure, its trees and plants and flowers, with refreshments and bathing pavilions, with resort for a stay or day, with its cozy cottages, its hotels, its fine piers and even the first pleasure pavilion, Hotel de Pinic Park (just below), that may whisper the thrilling tale of a day of beauty and a joy forever, and one of the modern wonders.

The Entrancingly Picturesque Ridgewood.

Ridgewood avenue is upon the crest of a broad ridge, straight as the crow flies and the wide sidewalks branches of the heavy-trunked live oaks extend their giant arms across the magnificent vista, forming an arch, and from these extended arms great festoons of Spanish moss sway as the trade winds from the tropic seas fan them. Looking straight ahead down this wide shell street one has the impression of a fairy path with the sky for a roof, but as you move along and cast an eye first to the right and then to the left you see fashioned cottage homes in the most delightful settings.

See the gleaming line of the street electric lights before the verandahed cottages, and the curved palms with their tufted heads, and the ornamental awning posts, and the hammocks swaying under the hand of the breeze, and the graceful forms which grace a hammock, and the smiling faces which adorn them, and catch the full picture of the Surpassing Beauty of Our Cottage Homes.

But one of Daytona's attractions is her natural attention and praise that fall to the street cottages. The streets are clean, charming cities, laid out with a lavish hand upon them, and as the whole system of the section of the country differs from the architecture of other sections so that one cottage differs from another. There are no two homes of strikingly similar design, nor do we see, as in some cities, the tenement-like structures of a monotonous architectural plan. Each

One of Daytona's crowning glories is her incomparable beach. No one who ever set foot upon its smooth, packed sands; no one who ever pedaled a bicycle over its expanse; no one who ever drove a prancing pair of horses and listened to the popping of their steel shoes upon its asphaltum-like face; no one who ever steered a high-power automobile down the broad stretch of wave-washed and surf-packed sand but realized that it is a world-beater, a world-wonder. Go stand upon this wide speedway and see the happy souls flit by in joyous mood, and answer whether this is not one of the seven modern wonders.

The Placid, Pellucid Halifax River.

Where think you is water with more picturesque surroundings? Nearly a mile wide, fringed with tropical vegetation, artistic cottages with roomy verandas looking out upon her bosom, gamey food fishes in countless numbers beckoning, as it were, to those with rod and reel; her bosom flecked with duck and coot and snowy-winged sea birds, which sit about as if for the sport of bobbing upon the waves; watch that lubberly old white headed pelican pouch a fat mullet, and that fish hawk struggling upward with his floundering load he snatched from the water.

See the beautiful launches, spick and span, their hampers and lockers bulging with refreshments both solid and liquid ready for a cruise upon th beautiful surface. Take out your fiel glass and sweep the river from Ormond bride to Ponce Park light house, then say whether the Halifax isn't a thing of beauty and a joy forever, and one of the modern wonders.

The Enchantingly Picturesque Ridgewood.

Ridgewood avenue is upon the crest of a broad ridge, straight as the crow flies and the wide-spreading branches of the heavy-trunked live oaks extend their giant arms across the magnificent vista, forming an arch, and from these extended arms great festoons of Spanish moss sway as the trade winds from the tropic seas fan them . Looking straight ahead down this white shell street one has the impression of a fairy path with elfish draperies, but as you move along and cast an eye first to the right and then to the left you see distinguished cottage homes in the most delightful settings.

See the glistening leaf of the grand magnolia which nature has varnished as no artists' brush ever could; and the cabbage palms with their burdens of showy fruit and swaying palms, see the lovely holly with its exquisite berry; see the climbing vines run riot in the trees; see the cryptogamous forms which gain a foothold on the great oaks and stately palms, and surely you will join in the chorus and say that this is a world wonder for beauty .

Surpassing Beauty of Our Cottage Homes.

No one of Daytona's attractions, perhaps, commands more nearly universal attention and praise than does the artistic cottages . The owners of these charming villas hail from every corner of the country and they bring their own architectural plans and build upon them, and, as the architecture of one section of the country differs from the architecture of another, so do our homes differ in outward appearance and structural beauty frot one another. There are no monotonous rows of strikingly similar buildings but the eye, as it sweeps by, is treated to a kaleidoscopic change which keeps the mind wondering, "What next?"

It is not only the exterior of many of these homes which rivets attention; within they are models of convenience, and the finishing and furnishing give evidence of the elegance and cultivation of those who worked it all out. Indeed, it is the interior arrangement and artistic furnishing and shading, more than the exterior appearance that gives a surpassing charm to Daytona homes . This feature justly merits prominence as another wonder.

Streets and Pavements the Most and Best.

Why the Architect of the Universe chose to give Daytona the most admirable, the most picturesque natural setting of all the cities of the South is not revealed, but that such is a fact must be apparent to the most superficial observer. With such lavish wealth of natural beauty it became an easy thing for the hand of man to give the finishing touches which have wrought out the colors and outlines of the big picture.

Man did all this in the laying out of the streets with their wide margins of parkage. The entire city becomes a great park, with driveways intersecting. miles upon miles of driveways so good as to attract motorists from all over the continent.

And as for the pavements, pavements that look and act like granite, —where else between the eastern and western seas are so many miles in proportion to inhabitants? The pavement question stands with the street as one of the chief drawing cards. Till some unheard of place reports more and better, Daytona throws down the gauntlet to the world.

Squirrels, Flowers, Birds and Frut.

Whatever oone's shortcomings and however indifferent or even callous one may be to many things, the mere mention of "flowers and Squirrels, birds and fruits" will send a thrill that is reflected in distended pupils and pricked ears.

For every visitor with a spare goober there is a bunny ready to come and accept your gift. He will sit bolt upright and knaw into the meat, casting furtive, saucy glances at you meanwhile.

Flowers Usually fresh and blooming the year 'round You are reminded of Goldsmith's couplet where

Smiling spring its earliest visit paid
And summer's lingering blossoms are delayed.

In one yard roses of variegated hues predominate; another household has a penchant for the poinsetta and the premises are aflame; another is hidden in a jungle of tall cane. Variety is the spice of life and here is where you find it.

The birds flit in, and with their joyous notes help to give fullness and symmetry to the picture .

As for fruits, choice citrus fruits, Daytona yields the palm to none for quality and quantity per acre. There are scores of citrus groves in proximity to the city, branches bending to the earth with their burdens of luscious golden globes, which for beauty, proficacy and all desirable qualities would truly astonish you.

The Fastest Autos and The Finest Out.

The seventh world wonder, do you ask? Come, whether from Missouri or from Maine, from Kalamazoo or Timbuckto, and you will be "shown." Here is where the world's record for speed is broken with every returning season. Autos, the biggest, the fastest, and the finest are on daily parade and the biz show is as free as the pure artesian water from the thousands of flowing wells. It is a continuous show with constantly shifting scene.

Everything goes, from a 2-horse power, up to a 4-horse power, and all degrees of speed from amateur to a two-mile-a-minute clip. You will probably catch the spirit, when you to the roads and the beach are yours. The Florida sunshine is free, the balmy ocean breezes are free, the birds and squirrels and flowers are free, the sparkling fountain water is free and you will have to go down into your wallet only for coin for auto and bed and board.

This is no fanciful picture; it's all here . It is drawing other thousands and holding them enthralled, it will charm and hold you. Come and see.

SEABREEZE and DAYTONA BEACH, two enterprising and progressive towns on the Halifax Peninsula, are geographically one although incorporated as separate municipalities. The towns parallel the peninsula north and south for a distance of from three and one-half to four miles, and extend east and west from the surging seas of the Atlantic Ocean to the Halifax River, the beautiful tide-water stream that sets them apart from Daytona with which they have close communion by means of three bridges, as well as a half-hour ferry service.

Seabreeze and Daytona Beach are essentially summer and winter resorts and are making hundreds of new friends every year among those who desire to escape the discomforting extremes of heat and cold, and their hotels and boarding houses are now receiving splendid patronage from the most discriminating class of tourists.

The mean average temperature, 80 degrees in the summer and 70 degrees in the winter, with an occasional extra rise or drop of a few days' duration, marks this as one of the most healthful locations in any section of the country, north, east, south or west.

The ocean itself, with its marvelous beach, hard as macadam and smooth as a floor, is the greatest attraction, although earth and air and sky seem to have entered into a combination to enhance its every charm. The beach is the famous automobile race course where every world's straightaway record has been made, and all these records it continues to hold without rivalry.

The sand of this famous speedway is composed largely of the shells of the coquina clam, which are about one-half inch long and very thin. For ages Nature has been rolling them up, washing them back into the surf and pulverizing them. Examined under the microscope each particle is round, unfit for mortar, builders say, because its smoothness prevents its holding together, yet, strange to contemplate, the very moment a wave leaves the wet, apparently soft beach these round particles settle down into a cement almost as hard as asphalt, beyond the comprehension of one who has not seen it. Repairs are unnecessary, as twice each 24 hours it is entirely rebuilt by the tides. The beach has a width of 300 to 500 feet, and can be used from two hours after until two hours before high tide, thus giving an average of seven or eight hours for automobiling some part of each day.

Seabreeze and Daytona Beach each have a permanent population of approximately 1500. Sanitary ordinances are strictly enforced, streets and sidewalks are well kept, and new streets are being opened as fast as the increasing population demands. Besides hotels and boarding houses there is ample cottage accommodation for all winter visitors.

Seabreeze contains a handsome opera house and a Congregational Church; at Daytona Beach is a M. E. Church. An excellent high school is situated near the division line between the two towns. Both towns have enterprising business establishments, as is evidenced by the advertisements on the left and right.

All the attractiveness of Seabreeze applies to Daytona Beach, the two towns being so similarly situated. The development of Daytona Beach has been fully as phenomenal as its sister on the north, and each year there is a substantial growth. The great sand dunes have been levelled and handsome homes have been built for both winter and all-year-round occupancy. Flowering shrubs have been planted, which are covered with a wealth of bloom both summer and winter.

Work of rebuilding the Clarendon hotel is now in progress. This magnificent fire-proof structure, which is to contain 250 rooms, when completed will be the peer of any hotel in Florida. The site is immediately north of the clubhouse of the Florida East Coast Automobile Association.

The Ocean Pier is a great attraction to fishermen and it is liked summer and winter with enthusiastic disciples of Izaak Walton, who find it nothing unusual to land fish weighing several hundred pounds.

PROGRESSIVE NEW SMYRNA

With its ancient ruins dating back to a time when the history of man runneth not, interlaced with wires of the modern telegraph and telephone, its miles of shell streets as hard and smooth as a floor and over-arched by hoary forest giants that grew in stately grandeur during the lapse of bygone centuries, New Smyrna is truly a place of romance and rest.

All nature here is very inviting to the tourist and pleasure-seeker. Here too is to be found the best fishing and boating in the State of Florida.

The people are thrifty, the business men enterprising, and all unite in extending the welcome hand of hospitality to strangers. There are five church edifices for white people and an equal number for the colored population; the town has an excellent high school, a splendid public library, and up-to-date business houses.

There are any number of pretty homes for the permanent population, which numbers close to 2,000, and scores very fine winter residences. There are good hotels and boarding houses where you can find accommodations to meet your requirements.

Adjoining New Smyrna is as fine a section of vegetable land as can be found anywhere. This land has been divided into small farms which can be bought at reasonable pr ces Some of the finest celery grown in the State is raised on this land. All other vegetables grow in abundance, and here, too, is the home of the famous Indian River oranges.

New Smyrna has no bonded indebtedness and the tax levy is low.

A point that no tourist should fail to visit is the ruins of the Old Spanish Mission which stand somber and alone about one and a quarter miles southwest of New Smyrna. A good road leads to the place and the trip can be easily made by an automobile. Silent, in the great pine flats by the margin of the forest, is this place of pilgrimage for the pious; this rendezvous for the picnicker. The ruins are extensive, and while there is no authentic history of their origin, it is presumed that the Mission was built by the Franciscans in the days when the once powerful Kingdom of Spain first planted its flag upon what is now American soil. It was built of coquina, the roof being of the same material, cut into thin slabs and covered with cement plaster. Extensive gardens surrounded it, which were enclosed by a stone wall, portions of which still remain. Visitors usually come in parties merry and joyous but the spell of the place soon falls upon them and they separate to sit alone, silent and meditative, under the arches or beside the ancient wall.

CORONADO

is situated on the peninsula opposite New Smyrna and is connected by a good road and bridge over the deep current of Indian River. Here you can put aside your conventional garb, breathe in large and deep the salty tonic of the sea and enjoy yourself to your heart's content with rod and reel in row or sail boat or in the ocean surf a short half-mile away. The great varieties of fish inhabiting the river and lagoon pass through the channel from the sea beneath the bridge. From verandas, upper balconies and windows you behold the magnificent river, the distant lagoons and islands, the forest-covered peninsula and the vast reaches of the Atlantic Ocean.

HAWES PARK

A pretty village located along the ridge above the Indian River two and one-half miles south of New Smyrna and connected with fine shell roads. There is the appearance of newness, comfort and seclusion about the place which stamps it as the abode of people who come here to enjoy the blessings of outdoor life away from places where crowds are apt to gather.

ORMOND is five miles north of Daytona, located on the western bank of the Halifax River. The location of the town presents of good drainage and perfect sanitation. The elevation is superb and ideal for winter homes. A wide bridge connects Ormond with Ormond Beach.

Many fine residences are maintained on either side of the river, most of them embellished with sub-tropical flora and shrubbery, besides thrifty orange and other citrus fruit trees.

The town is very cosmopolitan, has an excellent graded school, several churches, a fine public library, up-to-date places of business and comfortable and convenient hotels and boarding houses.

Ormond has many of the Florida attractions—fine fruit, good fishing, excellent automobiling, safe boating, salubrious climate and pleasant walks and drives.

At Ormond Beach is located the large Hotel Ormond, and its lesser sister, Bretton Inn. The former occupies a position overlooking the Halifax River, while the latter has as its outlook the magnificent beach and the broad Atlantic.

The walks in all directions are particularly attractive, and the arbors, shady and inviting spots and romantic nooks are crowded with rustic seats which are make invitations to enter into the enjoyment thereof.

Besides the broad, smooth ocean beach there are many drives for carriage or automobile—long drives and short drives; drives through groves of golden oranges; drives through dense tropical forests to Spanish ruins; drives to the ancient Causeway built by the slaves of planters of long ago, and drives to the plantations of hospitable settlers, whose places are replete with the interest of Southern fruits and flowers.

One of these interesting plantations is Number Nine, located on the peninsula, five miles north of the Hotel Ormond. Here is a fine orange grove, together with great varieties of other sub-tropical fruits and flowers.

Five miles further on you come to Moundgrove, one of the finest orange groves in this section of Florida. Moundgrove is on the west shore of the Halifax River and is amid pretty surroundings. The place is reached by a good road [passing Number Nine] and is a drive all tourists may enjoy.

PORT ORANGE is a pretty little village situated five miles south of Daytona on the Daytona-New Smyrna hard-surface road, the scenic highway of the East Coast. The town is located on the Halifax River, over which spans a bridge from the town to the peninsula opposite.

The town is well laid out and has many pretty homes owned and occupied by residents and winter tourists. It has several churches, one of the best graded schools in Volusia county, two general stores, a real estate agency and two or three hotels.

A large number of tourists and winter residents make Port Orange winter headquarters, one of the several attractions being the excellent fishing. Port Orange is on the river and a number of very fine citrus groves are nearby, where oranges, tangerines and grapefruit hang in profusion. Some of the best fruit raised in the State is to be found thereabout and excellent crops are raised.

West of Port Orange a short distance are the remains at the old Dunlawton sugar mill, a spot that is visited every year by hundreds of tourists. At one time all the country west of Port Orange surrounding the old mill, was a vast sugar-cane and indigo plantation, the mill once operated extensively in those days but has been in disuse for thirty or forty years.

A pretty automobile or carriage drive from Daytona is via the ocean beach to the approach of the Port Orange bridge, across the bridge and then passing through Port Orange to the ruins of the celebrated old sugar mill, returning to Daytona by the road on the mainland. This drive affords a very pleasing variety of scenery.

DeLAND, the county seat of Volusia County, is situated 23 miles southwest of Daytona and is reached from the latter city by an excellent hard-surface road recently constructed.

At DeLand is located the John B. Stetson University, one of the leading educational institutions of the South. Because of the interest in matters educational DeLand is known as "The Athens of Florida."

Stetson University has a faculty of 50 professors and instructors. There are over $400,000 in buildings and equipment; nearly $500,000 endowment; a Carnegie Library alone representing an investment in building, endowment and books, of more than $120,000. The library is the United States Government depository for the State of Florida, and contains over 15,000 volumes. Science Hall, one of the newest of 16 buildings, with its furnishings, represents an outlay of $60,000. Elizabeth Hall is one of the most beautiful college buildings in the South.

The city has a population of about 3,500, with a thickly settled country adjacent. DeLand proper is five miles east of the St. Johns River, on the high, rolling pine land of the great "Orange Ridge" of Florida.

The predominating products are oranges and grapefruit, the estimated crop from this vicinity being over 300,000 boxes this year. Grapes, peaches, pears, Japan persimmons, plums, pecans, guavas, strawberries and other fruits are grown in plenty.

In the way of public improvements are many miles of fine shell roads, an excellent high school, electric lights, a system of waterworks that is owned and operated by the city, supplying the purest water at little cost.

Nine houses of worship testify that DeLand is a church-going community. Baptists, Episcopalians, Methodists (Northern and Southern), Presbyterians, Christians and Catholics, besides colored Baptists and Methodists, are represented.

The graded school offers a ten years' course, and the building which it occupies is newly furnished throughout, and is one of the most commodious and best equipped public schools in the State.

The trip from Daytona to DeLand is made by automobile in a little over an hour, and there are many pretty drives in the vicinity of the county site. A good road leads to DeLeon Springs, five miles, a historic spot, where 60,000 gallons of water bubble from the earth every minute.

From DeLand automobiles go south to Osteen, 18 miles, on shell and marl roads, the St. Johns is crossed by ferry near Osteen and cars can then continue to Sanford and Orlando by hard road. There is a shell road from DeLand to Orange City, five miles and a good road from DeLand to Lake Helen, a like distance.

PROGRESSIVE NEW SMYRNA

With its ancient ruins dating back to a time when the history of man runneth not, interlaced with wires of the modern telegraph and telephone, its miles of shell streets as hard and smooth as a floor and over-arched by hoary forest giants that grew in stately grandeur during the lapse of bygone centuries, New Smyrna is truly a place of romance and rest.

All nature here is very inviting to the tourist and pleasure-seeker. Here too is to be found the best fishing and hunting in the State of Florida.

The people are thrifty, the business men enterprising, and all unite in extending the welcome hand of hospitality to strangers. There are five church edifices for white people and an equal number for the colored population; the town has an excellent high school, a splendid public library, and up-to-date business houses.

There are any number of pretty homes for the permanent population, which numbers close to 2,000, and some very fine winter residences. There are good hotels and boarding houses where you can find accomodations to meet your requirements.

Adjoining New Smyrna is as fine a section of vegetable land as can be found anywhere. This land has been divided into small farms which can be bought at reasonable pr ces Some of the finest celery grown in the State is raised on this land. All other vegetables grow in abundance, and here, too, is the home of the famous Indian River oranges.

A point that no tourist should fail to visit is the ruins of the Old Spanish Mission which stand somber and alone about one and a quarter miles southwest of New Smyrna. A good road leads to the place and the trip can be easily made by an automobile. Silent, in the great pine flats by the margin of the forest, is this place of pilgrimage for the pious; this rendezvous for the picnicker. The ruins are extensive, and while there is no authentic history of their origin, it is presumed that the Mission was built by the Franciscans in the days when the once powerful Kingdom of Spain first planted its flag upon what is now American soil.. It was built of coquina, the roof being of the same material, cut into thin slabs and covered with cement plaster. Extensive gardens surrounded it, which were enclosed by a stone wall, portions of which still remain. Visitors usually come in parties merry and curious but the spell of the place soon falls upon them and they separate to sit alone, silent and meditative, under the arches or beside the ancient well.

CORONADO

Is situated on the peninsula opposite New Smyrna and is connected by a good road and bridge over the deep current of Indian River. Here you can put aside your conventional garb, breathe in large and deep the salty tonic of the sea and enjoy yourself to your heart's content with rod and reel in row or sail boat or in the ocean surf a short half-mile away. The great varieties of fish inhabiting the river and lagoon pass through the channel from the sea beneath the bridge. From verandas, upper balconies and windows you behold the magnificent river, the distant lagoons and islands, the forest-covered peninsula and the vast reaches of the Atlantic Ocean.

HAWKS PARK

A pretty village located along the ridge above the Indian River two and one-half miles south of New Smyrna and connected with fine shell roads. There is the appearance of newness, comfort and seclusion about the place which stamps it as the abode of people who come here to enjoy the blessings of outdoor life away from places where crowds are apt to gather.

ORMOND is five miles north of Daytona, located on the western bank of the Halifax River. The location of the town permits of good drainage and perfect sanitation; the elevation is superb and ideal for winter homes. A wide bridge connects Ormond with Ormond Beach.

Many fine residences are maintained on either side of the river, most of them embellished with subtropical flora and shrubbery, besides thrifty orange and other citrus fruit trees.

The town is very cosmopolitan, has an excellent graded school, several churches, a fine public library, up-to-date places of business and comfortable and convenient hotels and boarding houses.

Ormond has many of the Florida attractions—fine fruit, good fishing, excellent automobiling, safe boating, salubrious climate and pleasant walks and drives.

At Ormond Beach is located the large Hotel Ormond, and its lesser sister, Bretton Inn. The former occupies a position overlooking the Halifax River, while the latter has as its outlook the magnificent beach and the broad Atlantic.

The walks in all directions are particularly attractive, and the arbors, shady and inviting spots and romantic nooks are crowded with rustic seats which are mute invitations to enter into the enjoyment thereof.

Besides the broad, smooth ocean beach there are many drives for carriage or automobile—long drives and short drives; drives through groves of golden oranges; drives through dense tropical forests to Spanish ruins; drives to the ancient Causeway built by the slaves of planters of long ago, and drives to the plantations of hospitable settlers, whose places are replete with the interest of Southern fruits and flowers.

One of these interesting plantations is Number Nine, located on the peninsula, five miles north of the Hotel Ormond. Here you see a fine orange grove, together with great varieties of other sub-tropical fruits and flowers.

Five miles further on you come to Moundgrove, one of the finest orange groves in this section of Florida. Moundgrove is on the headwaters of the Halifax River and is amid pretty surroundings. The place is reached by a good road [passing Number Nine] and is a drive all tourists may enjoy.

PORT ORANGE is a pretty little village situated five miles south of Daytona on the Daytona-New Smyrna hard-surface road, the scenic highway of the East Coast. The town is located on the Halifax River, over which spans a bridge from the town to the peninsula opposite.

The town is well laid out and has many pretty homes owned and occupied by residents and winter tourists. It has several churches, one of the best graded schools in Volusia county, two general stores, a real estate agency and two or three hotels.

A large number of tourists and winter residents make Port Orange winter headquarters, one of the several attractions being the excellent fishing. Port Orange is in the orange belt and a number of very fine citrus groves are nearby, where oranges, tangerines and grape-fruit hang in profusion. Some of the best trucking land in the State is to be found thereabout and excellent crops are raised.

West of Port Orange a short distance are the remains of the old Dunlawton sugar mill, a spot that is visited every year by hundreds of tourists. At one time all the country west of Port Orange, surrounding the old mill, was a vast sugar-cane and indigo plantation. The mill was operated extensively in those days but has been in disuse for thirty or forty years.

A pretty automobile or carriage drive from Daytona is via the ocean beach to the approach of the Port Orange bridge, across the bridge and then passing through Port Orange to the ruins of the celebrated old sugar mill, returning to Daytona by the road on the mainland. This drive affords a very pleasing variety of scenery.

DELAND, the county seat of Volusia County, is situated 23 miles southwest of Daytona and is reached from the latter city by an excellent hard-surface road recently constructed.

At DeLand is located the John B. Stetson University, one of the leading educational institutions of the South. Because of the interest in matters educational DeLand is known as "The Athens of Florida."

Stetson University has a faculty of 50 professors and instructors. There are over $400,000 in buildings and equipment; nearly $300,000 endowment; a Carnegie Library alone representing an investment in building, endowment and books, of more than $120,000. The library is the United States Government depository for the State of Florida, and contains over 15,000 volumes. Science Hall, one of the newest of 16 buildings, with its furnishings, represents an outlay of $60,000. Elizabeth Hall is one of the most beautiful college buildings in the South.

The city has a population of about 3,500, with a thickly settled country adjacent. DeLand proper is five miles east of the St. Johns River, on the high, rolling pine land of the great "Orange Ridge" of Florida.

The predominating products are oranges and grapefruit, the estimated crop from this vicinity being over 300,000 boxes this year. Grapes, peaches, pears, Japan persimmons, plums, pecans, guavas, strawberries and other fruits are grown in plenty.

In the way of public improvements are many miles of fine shell roads, an excellent high school, electric lights, a system of waterworks that is owned and operated by the city, supplying the purest water at little cost.

Nine houses of worship testify that DeLand is a church-going community. Baptists, Episcopalians, Methodists (Northern and Southern), Presbyterians, Christians and Catholics, besides colored Baptists and Methodists, are represented.

The graded school offers a ten years' course, and the building which it occupies is newly furnished throughout, and is one of the most commodious and best equipped public schools in the State.

From DeLand automobiles go south to Osteen, 18 miles, on shell and marl roads; the St. Johns is crossed by ferry near Osteen and cars can then continue to Sanford and Orlando by hard road. There is a shell road from DeLand to Orange City, five miles, and a good road from DeLand to Lake Helen, a like distance.

TRYING TO ESTABLISH IDENTITY AS LONG-LOST SON.

BOSTON, Jan.25—The most notable identity case ever tried before an American judge, a case rivaling in interest and resembling in many respects the famous Tichborne case in England a generation ago, is now nearing the close of its trial in the Middlesex probate court in East Cambridge. For nearly four months the public hereabouts has followed with intense interest the daily court proceedings which are expected to prove whether the North Dakota ranchman calling himself Daniel Blake Russell is really the son of Daniel Russell of Melrose, as he claims to be, or is a shrewd and daring impostor. For weeks the trial has formed a staple topic of discussion throughout New England. And with the end of the trial in sight, it may be said that public opinion in regard to the validity of the claim seems to be as much divided as at the beginning of the famous case.

The trial has been enlivened with romantic features, surprises and sensations which would find difficulty of belief if appearing in a work of fiction. At first sight it would appear to be an easy matter for a man to prove his identity in a community where he had passed his boyhood until his eighteenth or nineteenth year and where many friends and relatives who have known him intimately as a youth were still living. And, on the other hand, it would seem preposterous for a man to believe he could successfully impersonate another person in the face of the fact that person had spent his youth and was still remembered by friends and relatives. And yet, friends and relatives and the general public who have followed the testimony day by day seem unable to agree on the solution of the question.

The testimony of the man who is trying to establish his identity as the long lost son of the late Daniel Russell, and thereby secure from the other son a half interest in the million dollar estate left by the elder Russell, is stronger than many a tale of romance and adventure. In his fight for recognition the claimant has told on the stand, in a simple way, and with remarkable memory, of the events which took place in the home which he says he left in Melrose 26 years ago. For a time he lived the life of a tramp, getting from one end of the country to another as best he might. He has worked with cowboys and as a deckhand, shod horses in blacksmith shops, and spent winters in lumber camps and mills in the Northwest. Finally he landed in North Dakota. There he was successful in speculations in hay and cattle lands and became a manager of a ranch and a prosperous land owner.

To support his claim as Daniel Blake Russell there have been produced in court upwards of 50 witnesses to identify the claimant as the son of Daniel Russell. Of these some have known him for forty years. They knew him intimately in many cases, and were acquainted with the peculiarities and characteristics of his youth. With the presentation of these witnesses, Senator Lewis A. Russell, of North Dakota, who is conducting the case for the plaintiff rested his case.

To oppose this claim, the respondents have stated that the claimant is an impostor—that Daniel Blake Russell, but James Herbert Russell, who was born of poor parents in Hingham, N. Y., in 1865, three years after the birth of the rightful son. They have produced a host and woman in court to testify to the identity of the former and have impeached many of the witnesses of the claimant, and the latter's family. Among those who have claimed him as their son. Numerous others have taken the stand to say that he is the "Jim" Blanke who lived a wild life in northwestern New York as a boy woodsman, blacksmith and stable hand.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

OVERCOME!

To overcome or be overcome—that's the question.

The successful man surveys the situation, he overlooks the difficulties in his way. The failure "sees" because he knows the difficulties to overcome him.

There are the Wright brothers.

When those boys were running their little bicycle repair shop in Dayton, O., and were making experiments along the line of aerial flight the cranks said:

"Invent a machine heavier than air that will fly! Why, those boys are crazy. It can't be done."

It was done.

And it was done by overcoming obstacles that others declared to be insurmountable.

When Lewis Pfund proposed to put cash for investment in the stock of the Edison Phonograph Company he was told that he was a fool for doing so.

But Pfund put his dollars into what Edison said would be a great boon for keeping the children. And when he saw he grasped the wide and tied them together to stay.

The impossible was achieved.

When Whitney proposed to build the cotton gin and show what their hands "Impossible. The fiber of the plant is too short. You can't do it."

But Whitney held his machine and wrote over it, "Cotton is king."

"Hello, there!" Bell shouted the knickers when they heard about Bell's invention of the telephone. "Talk without a wire!" said the same disbelievers when tired of wireless telegraphy.

Some people are only converted, like the Apostle Paul, by being struck by lightning.

There was the Gunnison river. It was on the wrong side of the Rocky mountains. A daring government engineer proposed to bore a tube through the mountains and divert the stream.

"Whoa!" said the skeptics.

The other day President Taft touched a key and the mighty river left its other side of the mountain, and the Gunnison river ran through the tube.

Overcome.

It is a great word. It marks the difference between those who succeed and those who fail. It is the motive of progress. It is the keynote of the New Testament—overcome and you shall have the crown of life.

What are obstacles or to overcome?

Why, overcome!

AGED COUPLE CELEBRATE WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

MR AND MRS. AUSTIN B. FRENCH ADVANCED IN YEARS, BUT YOUNG IN HEART, STILL HAND IN HAND TOGETHER.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin B. French, guests of the Monroe, Thursday passed the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding day.

Mr and Mrs Austin, who own a handsome home in Brookline, Mass., have been coming to Florida for the last twenty years, the last eight of the winters being spent at the Clarendon, Southwest, with the exception of last winter, when they were advised to remain at home owing to Mrs. French's coming down on an icicle received at the Chicagoland the previous season, when she sustained a fractured hip caused by a heavy wardrobe falling upon her. She was on the time brought to the Monroe and in this city and treated by Dr. Klock. Mrs French has, however, entirely recovered from that accident and is as agile as a girl of twenty in that no one would suspect that either Mr or Mrs. French were approaching the three-score-and-ten of 69 and 70 years.

Their friends, Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Smith and Mrs. Smith's mother, Mrs. Bond, were much in the secret of the anniversary and the informal parting of wedded life together, and they had planned to have Mr. and Mrs. French dine out last night, knowing quite far into the day and the celebration was there from an impromptu affair. The weather march was played and, as Mrs. French said, sounded quite familiar over a lapse of sixty years.

Their fiftieth anniversary was celebrated at their Brookline home with a reunion of their family. They have two daughters and a son, the latter, Dr. Charles A. French, being a prominent optician of Boston. They also have several grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Mrs. French has preserved a copy of a newspaper containing a notice of their marriage which was naturally prized very highly. Their friends are many here, as they have been going to the winter resort for many years, and their pleasant disposition and cheerful presence seems to retain and they should be fulfilled a strong old age of usefulness and happiness.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25—My heartfelt thanks to all the Host and women who have been so kind to me. I did not know there were so many fine people in the world." were the parting words of Mary LaRue, who sailed today for Europe to spend a year in study before becoming a grand opera star if the judgment of competent critics is confirmed Miss LaRue is destined to become the world's greatest soprano singer.

Only a short time ago Miss LaRue was virtually without money or friends. The death of her father in Seattle, Neb., had left her an orphan. Her only inheritance for her a position as a chorus singer in a musical comedy company. Ricardo Martin, the well known tenor, chanced to hear her sing and pronounced her voice to be the most wonderful he ever heard.

The orphan girl was advised to come to New York. She arrived in the city without funds and appealed to the grand opera managers for a trial. Giulio Gatti-Casazza, the director of the Metropolitan Opera House, heard the young girl sing and agreed with Ricardo Martin that her voice was the most marvelous soprano he had ever heard, even exceeding the natural voice of Miss Nellie.

Throughout the remains of the past winter and began to practice. The fortune of wealth and social prominence hastened to give her aid. Several thousand dollars were soon raised to send her to Europe, where she is to study for a year under Maestro Lombardi. It is agreed that Miss LaRue must be ready for operatic appearance in the fall of 1911. She will be put to the test at her debut.

STEAMER UNCLE SAM NOW AT VOLUSIA AVENUE DOCK

The steamer Uncle Sam was brought up yesterday from Mellen's ferry yard, where she was remodeled this fall, and docked in her slip at the foot of Volusia avenue. She will be used by Captain Mellen in connection with the steamer Cherokee on the Titusville and New Smyrna runs. The finishing touches will be put to the boat at her dock.

The Nature Student's Story.

"In my boyhood I once captured a nest of three young thrushes. I put them in a safe cage by an open window, and their mother came and fed them regularly with worms and grubs. Suppose."

The teacher, a nature student, nodded.

"The mother," he resumed, "must have expected her children to be in that cage, for she did not, apparently, look for them elsewhere. She appeared with a wing of a dragonfly, a bit of a caterpillar, a beetle. And she never found them. Like wise, she never found the nest empty. She kept on feeding the young birds in the cage. One day I opened the door of the cage and released them. Then I watched from a window. The mother bird came to the cage door, found it open, flew in front of it, looked around, and flew away. That is what must have been the end of the first fledgling."

The teacher paused, and Peter saw between a low murmur arose, a sigh, and perhaps of sympathy, perhaps of angry disbelief.

Ready Wit.

Many good stories are told of the "Fred" Craig, for so many years a familiar figure on the Lowell cricket and football grounds. One of the best Craig began at the Great Yarmouth, this is my favorite version:

Craig, you said that at Leyton you were?

Yes, sir," answered the bowler, "and I think I did all right at Leyton, too. Why, I took nine in an innings there."

Ah, indeed! And where else?

Before my benefit at Yarmouth, sir, I had a complimentary performance at Lowestoft."

But Craig knew how to answer questions. One is often asked by a friend, "How is the wife?" Craig's reply was, "Oh, she's very well, thank you, sir, but she's always ailing."

TRYING TO ESTABLISH IDENTITY AS LONG-LOST SON.

BOSTON, Jan.22—The most notable identity case ever tried before an American judge, a case rivaling in interest and resembling in many respects the famous Tichborne case in England a generation ago, is now nearing the close of its trial in the Middlesex probate court in East Cambridge. For nearly four months the public hereabouts has followed with intense interest the daily court proceedings which are expected to prove whether the North Dakota ranchman calling himself Daniel Blake Russell is really the son of Daniel Russell of Melrose, as he claims to be, or is a shrewd and daring impostor. For weeks the trial has formed a staple topic of discussion throughout New England. And, with the end of the trial in sight, it may be said that public opinion in regard to the validity of the claim seems to be as much divided as at the beginning of the famous case.

The trial has been enlivened with romantic features, surprises and sensations which would find difficulty of belief if appearing in a work of fiction. At first sight it would appear to be an easy matter for a man to prove his identity in a community where he had passed his boyhood until his eighteenth or nineteenth year and where many friends and relatives who have known him intimately as a youth were still living. And, on the other hand, it would seem preposterous for a man to believe he could successfully impersonate another person in a community where that person had spent his youth and was still remembered by friends and relatives. And yet, friends and relatives and the general public who have followed the testimony day by day seem unable to agree on the solution of the question.

The testimony of the man who is trying to establish his identity as the long lost son of the late Daniel Russell, and thereby secure from the other son a half interest in the million dollar estate left by the elder Russell, is stranger than many a tale of romance and adventure. In his fight for recognition the claimant has told on the stand, in a simple way and with remarkable memory, of the events which took place in the home which he says he left in Melrose 24 years ago. For a time he lived the life of a tramp, getting from one part of the country to another as best he might. He has worked with circuses and as a deckhand, shod horses in blacksmith shops, and spent winter in lumber camps and mills in the Northwest. Finally he landed in North Dakota. There he was successful in speculations in hay and cattle lands and became a manager of a ranch and a prosperous land owner.

To support his claim as Daniel Blake Russell there have been produced in court upwards of 50 witnesses to identify the claimant as the son of Daniel Russell. Of these some have known him for forty years. They knew him intimately in many cases, and were acquainted with the peculiarities and characteristics of his youth. With the presentation of these witnesses, Senator Leslie A. Simpson, of North Dakota, who is conducting the case for the plaintiff, rested his case.

To oppose this claim, the respondents have stated that the claimant is an impostor—not Daniel Blake Russell, but James Delbert Ruseau, who was born of poor parents in Bombay, N. Y., in 1865, three years after the birth of the rightful heir. They have produced a man and woman in court to testify that they are the the drother and sister respectively, of the claimant, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ruseau, who have claimed him as their son. Numerous others have taken the stand to say that he is the "Jim" Ruseau whom they knew in northwestern New York as a backwoodsman, blacksmith and circus hand.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

OVERCOME!

To overcome or be overcome—that's the question.

The successful man succeeds because he overcomes the difficulties in his way. The failure fails because he allows the difficulties to overcome him.

There are the Wright brothers.

When these boys were running their little bicycle repair shop in Dayton, O., and were making experiments along the line of aerial flight the croakers said:

"Invent a machine heavier than air that will fly! Why, those boys are crazy. It can't be done."

It was done.

And it was done by overcoming obstacles that others believed to be insurmountable.

When Cyrus Field proposed to lay a path for intelligence on the bottom of the ocean the mockers derided his folly.

But Field put his fortune into cable factories and built a great vessel for laying the cables. And when the line broke and people said "I told you so" he grappled the ends and tied them together to stay.

The impossible was achieved.

When Whitney proposed to build the cotton gin wiseacres shook their heads: "Impossible. The fiber of the plant is too short. You can't do it."

"Talk over a wire!" sneered the knockers when they heard about Bell's invention of the telephone. "Talk without a wire!" said the same disbelievers when told of wireless telegraphy.

Some people are only converted, like the Apostle Paul, by being struck by lightning.

There was the Gunnison river. It was on the wrong side of the Rocky mountains. A daring government engineer proposed to bore a hole through the mountains and divert the stream.

"W-h-a-t!" said the skeptics.

The other day President Taft touched a key out in the arid valley on the other side of the mountains, and the Gunnison river ran through the tunnel!

Overcome!

It is a great word. It marks the difference between man and the beast. It is the touchstone of progress. It is the keynote of the New Testament. "Overcome and you shall have the crown of life."

Will you overcome or be overcome? Which?

Lord Mount Stephen.

AGED COUPLE CELEBRATE WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

MR AND MRS. AUSTIN B. FRENCH ADVANCED IN YEARS, BUT YOUNG IN HEART, STILL HAND IN HAND TOGETHER.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin B. French, guests of the Morgan, Thursday passed the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding day.

Mr .and Mrs. Austin ,who own a handsome home in Brookline, Mass. have been coming to Florida for the past twenty years, the last eight or ten winters being spen at the Colonnades, Seabreeze, with the exception of last winter, when they were obliged to remain at home, owing to Mrs .rench's condition from an accident received at the Colonnades the previous season, when she sustained a fractured hip caused by a heavy wardrobe falling upon her. She was at the time brought to the hospital in this city and treated by Dr. Klock. Mrs. French has, however, entirely recovered from that accident and is as agile as a girl of twenty. In fact, no one would suspect that either Mr .or Mrs., French were anything like their respective ages of 85 and 82 years.

Their friends, Mr. and Mrs A. H. and Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Stanley and others at the hotel would liked very much to have made an event of this unusual period of wedded life together, had they but known it in time but Mr. and Mrs .French did not let them know until quite too late in the day and the celebration was therefore an importu affair. The wedding march was played and, as Mrs. French said, sounded quite familiar over a lapse of sixty years.

Their fiftieth anniversary was celebrated at their Brookline home surrounded by their family. They have two daughters and a son, the latter, Dr. Charles A. French, being a prominent optician of Boston . They also have several grandchildren and one great grand son.

Mrs .French has preserved a copy of a newspaper containing a notice of their marriage which she naturally prizes very highly. Their friends are now hoping to ten years later join in the celebration of their 60th anniversary and from present indications there seems no reason why their hope should not be fulfilled so strong in the qualities and appearance of youth is this remarkable couple.

HAD NOT SEEN DAYTONA FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS.

Mr and Mrs .R. B. Rogers and daughter, Clara, who have been visiting with Mr. Roger's sister, Mrs. Leon Vann, on West Magnolia avenue, for the past ten days or two weeks, left yesterday afternoon to continue their tour down the coast and to Cuba. They will return to their home at Columbus, Ohio, by way of the gulf and up the Mississippi and Ohio rivers to Cincinnati.

Mr. Rogers was in Daytona eighteen years ago, but had not visited here since that time and was surprised at the extent of the improvements in the city and surrounding territory. He prolonged his stay here to double the time intended and there is but little doubt that he will return next winter and invest in property for a home.

There is a charm about Florida, and especially beautiful Daytona that draws one here again and again and again, even after years of absence. Florida sand in your shoes and a taste of mullet from the Halifax river and you are a bond slave forever.

TON OF NITRO-GLYCERINE EXPLODES: MANY KILLED

FISHKILL LANDING, N.Y. Jan. 22—Although rescue parties are working desperately today it is not believed any of the six men still imprisoned in the wrecked tunnel under Great Neck Mountain will be found alive. Five bodies have been recovered. The explosion presumably of a ton of nitro-glycerine caused the disaster. Eighteen men were in the tunnel at the time of the explosion. Seven escaped but two of the number are expected to die from injuries.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22—"My heartfelt thanks to all the men and women who have been so kind to me. I did not know there were so many nice people in the world." were the parting words of Mary LaSalle, who sailed today for Europe to spend a year in study before becoming a grand opera star if the judgment of competent critics is confirmed Miss LaSalle is destined to become the world's greatest soprano singer.

Only a short time ago Miss LaSalle was virtually without money or friends The death of her father in Beatrice, Neb., had left her an orphan. Her voice obtained for her a position as a chorus singer in a musical comedy company. Riccardo Martin, the celebrated tenor, chanced to hear her sing and pronounced her voice to be th most wonderful he ever heard.

The orphan girl was advised to come to New York. She arrived in the city without funds and appealed to the grand opera managers for a trial. Guilio Gatti-Casazza, the director of the Metropolitan Opera House heard the young girl sing and agreed with Ricardo Martin that her voice was the most marvelous soprano he had ever heard, even exceeding the natural voice of Mme. Melba.

Thereafter the fortunes of the poor orphan girl began to brighten. New Yorkers of wealth and social prominence hastened to give her aid. Several thousand dollars were contributed to send her to Europe, where she is to study for a year under Maestro Lombardi. It is agreed that when her year of preparation is ended Miss LaSalle shall return to America to become one of the star sopranos of the Metropolitan company.

Spencer, by Rev. Dr. Forrer, of the Park Presbyterian church, of Erie. Court was adjourned and members of the Erie county bar attended the funeral in a body. A son of the deceased, Judge Selden P. The Nature Student's Story.

"In my boyhood I once captured a nest of three young thrushes. I put them in a gilt cage by an open window, and their mother came and fed them regularly with worms and grasshoppers."

The speaker, a nature student, sighed.

"The mother," he resumed, "must have expected her little ones to be soon liberated. She fed them, as I said, regularly for three days on fresh food. Then one evening at sunset she appeared with a sprig of green in her mouth. She thrust the green in through the gilt bars. Then, singing a sweet, sad song, she flew away. And she never came back. Her offspring the next morning lay dead, side by side, on the bottom of the cage. The sprig she had brought them, which was nearly consumed, was a sprig of the deadly larkspur. 'Freedom or death! Death or freedom!' That is what must have been the burden of her farewell song."

The narrator paused, and from his listeners a low murmur arose, a murmur perhaps of sympathy, perhaps of angry disbelief.

Ready Wit.

Many good stories are told of the "Poet" Craig, for so many years a familiar figure on the London cricket and football grounds. On one occasion Craig began at the Oval, "Gentlemen, this is my favorite ground," when some one interrupted:

"Craig, you said that at Leyton last week."

"Yes, sir," returned the unabashed poet, "and I shall say it at Canterbury next week. The ground on which the noble game is being played before an assembly of intelligent and enlightened purchasers of my poetry is always my favorite ground for the time being."

But Craig knew how to keep an impertinent interrupter in his place. Once a stout, red faced man broke in on one of his speeches with: "Craig, you're making a lot of money out of fools. When are you going to set up a rival?"

"When you come and live next door to me, sir," was the answer, and the red faced man turned crimson.

Another man at the club once said: "Now, Craig, to us how many you've made out of bad poetry?"

"Men, I venture to say sir, that you've made out of bad manners."—London Scraps.

An American Grammar.

Robert R. Hitt, who at the time represented our government in Paris as a secretary of legation, went to Egypt in regard to a matter involving the life of a Greek American subject. He landed in Alexandria and went to the Hotel Europe and found the rotunda clerk busy assigning rooms to the newly arrived passengers, a regular polyglot in languages. He heard him speak Arabic, Greek, French, Italian and German. So when it came Mr. Hitt's turn to register he politely said, "Do you speak American?" The clerk promptly replied: "A leetle. Der was one American here lately who gave me an American grammar." Mr. Hitt asked to have a look at the book. The clerk promptly laid one of the guests to get the book out of his room, and while the book was being brought the clerk said, "De grammar is phonetic." When the book was brought to and behold, it was a copy of Petroleum V. Nasby's letters.—D. R. Locke while in Egypt had presented a copy to the clerk, telling him it was an American grammar.

Mended His Manners.

A certain English officer is noted for his zeal in and quickness in preparee. In the very early days of his career he was ordered to Bombay and was attached to the staff of the then commander in chief as A. D. C.

Shortly after his arrival, at a function at the government house, a new military secretary who, in the conscious pride of his new position, had a hearty contempt for subalterns of all degrees, with a hasty stare through his eyeglass, offered him two fingers to shake.

The A. D. C., quite unabashed, looked at him for a moment or two and then said quickly:

"Hang it all, major, the governor gives me three!"

The whole room was convulsed, and the military secretary, now a colonel, profited by the hint and mended his manners, but he never forgave the A. D. C.—London Tit-Bits.

Bjornson's Advice.

There is a story told of Bjornstjerne Bjornson that, arriving at a late hour at the town of Bergen, which was en fete to receive him, he overhauled to the expectant people no finer words of wisdom than a general recommendation to go to bed.

In vain they appealed to him for "song of sentiment." The great Dramatist, said he, gave the same advice under conditions of all sorts, and what was good enough for Berlin must suffice for Bergen.

Three years later, on visiting the town for the second time, the master novelist found a deserted city. Not a light burned in the dismal railway station, no banners waved, no address was were read by portly burgomasters. In vain Bjornson asked for a song.

"They have all gone to bed," was the reply. And so Bergen remembered.

Young Diplomat Whose Wedding Was Postponed.

The death of D. O. Mills brought back to the United States his son-in-law, Whitelaw Reid, ambassador to Great Britain, and the embassy was left in charge of Secretary William Phillips. The latter could not leave London for New York to be married to Miss Caroline Astor Drayton, and the wedding was postponed.

Bored No More.

"Yes," said the famous M. P., "I used to be pestered to death by a bore. My secretary was a good natured, obliging chap, and he could never find it in his heart to turn the bore away. Just as sure as I was in the bore was certain to be admitted.

"One day, after an hour's martyrdom at the man's hands, I determined to end their persecution. So I called my secretary and said to him somewhat testily:

"'Purton, do you know what makes Smith come here so regularly?'

"'Oh, sir!' said Purton, 'I can't say I do.'

"'Well, Purton,' said I, 'I don't mind telling you in confidence that he's after your job.'

"From that day," concluded the M. P., "I saw no more of the bore."

An American Grammar.

Robert R. Hitt, who at the time represented our government in Paris as a secretary of legation, went to Egypt in regard to a matter involving the life of a Greek American subject. He landed in Alexandria and went to the Hotel Europe and found the rooming clerk busy assigning rooms to the newly arrived passengers, a regular polyglot in languages. He heard him speak Arabic, Greek, French, Italian and German. So when it came Mr. Hitt's turn to register he jocosely said, "Do you speak American?" The clerk promptly replied: "A leetle. Der vas one American here lately who gave me an American grammar." Mr. Hitt asked to have a look at the book. The clerk promptly told one of the garcons to get the book out of his room, and while the book was being brought the clerk said, "De grammar is phonetic." When the book was brought, lo and behold, it was a copy of Petroleum V. Nasby's letters. D. R. Locke while in Egypt had presented a copy to the clerk, telling him it was an American grammar.

Mended His Manners.

A certain English officer is noted for his ready wit and quickness in repartee. In the very early days of his career he was ordered to Bombay and was attached to the staff of the then commander in chief as A. D. C.

Shortly after his arrival, at a function at the government house, a new military secretary who, in the conscious pride of his new position, had a hearty contempt for subalterns of all degrees, with a glassy stare through his eyeglass, offered him two fingers to shake.

The A. D. C., quite unabashed, looked at him for a moment or two and then said genially:

"Hang it all, major, the governor gives me three!"

The whole room was convulsed, and the military secretary, now a colonel, profited by the hint and mended his manners, but he never forgave the A. D. C.—London Tit-Bits.

Bjornson's Advice.

There is a story told of Bjornstjerne Bjornson that, arriving at a late hour at the town of Bergen, which was en fete to receive him, he vouchsafed to the expectant people no finer words of wisdom than a general recommendation to go to bed.

In vain they appealed to him for "song or sentiment." The great Bismarck, said he, gave the same advice under conditions all similar, and what was good enough for Berlin must suffice for Bergen.

Three years later, on visiting the town for the second time, the master novelist found a deserted city. Not a light burned in the dismal railway station, no banners waved, no addresses were read by portly burgomasters. In vain Bjornson asked for a cab.

"They have all gone to bed," was the reply. And so Bergen remembered.

The death of D. O. Mills brought back to the United States his son-in-law, Whitelaw Reid, ambassador to Great Britain, and the embassy was left in charge of Secretary William Phillips. Bored No More.

"Yes," said the famous M. P., "I used to be pestered to death by a bore. My secretary was a good natured, obliging chap, and he could never find it in his heart to turn the bore away. Just as sure as I was in the bore was certain to be admitted.

"One day, after an hour's martyrdom at the man's hands, I determined to end that persecution. So I called my secretary and said to him mysteriously:

"'Parton, do you know what makes Smith come here so regularly?'

"'No, sir,' said Parton, 'I can't say I do.'

"'Well, Parton,' said I, 'I don't mind telling you in confidence that he's after your job.'

"From that day," concluded the M. P., "I saw no more of the bore."

A TIED UP ESTATE.

By MARY A. BOWERS.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

When Miss Olivia Hale died at seventy worth a million it was found that she had planned for the disposition of her money far ahead. She divided it between a nephew and a niece on condition they should marry within six months after her death, otherwise it was to go to charity. The nephew, David Hale, was at the time devoted to Florence Merritt, whom he expected to marry. Leona Geddes, the niece, was engaged to be married to Hamilton Niles. Neither cousin had seen the other but on a few occasions.

Soon after they came to know of the bequests and conditions they met for a conference. Miss Geddes announced that she would marry the man to whom she was engaged. This rendered it impossible for Mr. Hale to fulfill the condition imposed upon him. He was not bound to marry the girl he had been attentive to and for the sake of the bequest was disappointed at his cousin's refusal to comply with the terms of the will. He used every argument to persuade her to change her mind, but the best he could do was to induce her to unite with him in an effort to break the will. They were the only heirs-at-law and supposed they would get the property anyway.

But they reckoned wrong. Three charitable institutions to whom the property was left in case the cousins failed to comply with the conditions arrayed themselves for a sturdy fight Hale proposed and was accepted to the girl he had been attentive to, and with Miss Geddes' fiance there were four people interested in the will being broken.

The fight was a long one. There was a decision against the cousins, and they appealed to a higher court. The decision was reversed, and the institutions fighting for their rights appealed. By this time a good deal of money had been spent, most of which came out of the estate. Besides, while the case was in court the property could not be sold, and some of it depreciated in value. David Hale was very much worried. Indeed, his nerves were on edge, and Miss Merritt found that his condition affected her own health. They had many spats, and their engagement was broken and renewed several times. Miss Geddes was made unhappy by the fear that Mr. Niles, who when he offered his hand had been perfectly satisfied to take her without fortune, would in case she was deprived of her inheritance leave her in the lurch. Hale considered his cousin to blame for the situation and conceived an antipathy for her which she heartily returned. So these four people were made miserable by Miss Olivia Hale's effort to manage her property after her death.

The business before the upper courts was voluminous, and decisions were delayed. The cousins' lawyers informed them that they had little hope that the case would ultimately be won. They also told them that if they were disposed to fulfill the conditions of the will they might take advantage of an ambiguity in its wording to do so.

This proved the most unfortunate turn in the whole affair. Instead of instantly declining this proposition they took it under consideration. Hale and Niles both seemed to lean to the side that this would be a common sense solution of the problem. At any rate, they talked or acted in a way that induced the two girls to break their engagements. Hale and Miss Geddes, being free, resorted to info the lawyers' advice and agree to comply with the terms of the will.

This rumpled a new legal complication, with it not only prolonged the case in court, but added greatly to the expense. The counsel seldom met, and when they did they quarreled. Miss Merritt, who had spent several years in music while engaged to Hale, went to Europe to study and went to a sanitarium. Niles married a worldly girl he cared nothing for and was divorced within eighteen months. Miss Geddes, who had loved him devotedly, was broken hearted.

And still the case dragged on.

Finally one day a decision was announced. It was decided, first, that the cousins had not complied with the terms of the will within the specified time and could not benefit by doing so afterward; second, the property was to go to the charitable institutions specified.

Then came the casting of the accounts. Lawyers' fees and court fees were set down at $300,000, depreciation of real estate, $200,000; accumulated interest against the estate, $75,000, and shrinkage of stocks and bonds during a financial crisis, $40,000, leaving $225,000 to go to five institutions, or $45,000 each.

When Miss Olivia Hale died four young people had every prospect of a happy domestic life. Had she simply died without laying plans to manage her property after her death, leaving it where she liked without conditions, she would at least have done no harm and might have done much good. As it was, she wrecked four lives, and the only real benefit she conferred was on the lawyers.

Niles was so disappointed and injured at the outcome that he no longer cared whether Miss Geddes married him or not. She married a colonel. Niles then died in the sanitarium. Miss Merritt is a cripple. She would like to marry again, but the girl he wanted to marry is divorced now. Miss Geddes has long ago passed out of this life, but she will never marry any one but Niles and has become a sour old maid. Not a child of those of the third generation to whom the testator intended her wealth should go has been born.

AN ODD CASE.

By EVELYN WITWORTH.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

In the summer of 1892 in a New England coast town John Barnes and Avis Bradbury stood on a beach one night talking in an excited undertone. Barnes was speaking.

"I tell you, Avis, they're going to murder me. I was told that your father stated at the tavern that our marriage should never take place, and your brother Dick said he was going to shoot me on sight."

"Their threats don't mean anything, John, or they would not have made them thus publicly. They know you have no means and are opposed to you on that account. But that's all. They will never raise a finger to hurt you, and when we are once married they will drop their objections."

This dialogue was heard by one who was lying on the sands screened from the couple by some sagebushes. John Barnes was not seen nor heard of by any one in the town, including his sweetheart, the next day or the next. Had he gone away he would certainly have communicated with Avis, but she was as ignorant of his whereabouts as the others. Steven Bradbury, her father, and Richard, her brother, having threatened him, were looked upon with suspicion.

Then one day a boy brought to John's cost from a neighboring town. It was found on a dune torn almost to shreds and covered with spots of blood.

The two Bradburys were arrested and thrown into prison charged with the murder of John Barnes. There was plenty of evidence against them of a circumstantial nature. They had threatened Barnes openly, and the man who had heard the dialogue between John and Avis was ready to testify that John feared for his life at their hands. But since there was no direct evidence, since it was not even known positively that Barnes was dead, the authorities wisely resolved to wait. Meanwhile the father and son languished in prison. Avis felt assured that they were innocent; that her lover had met with foul play at the hands of some one else. But who could have had a motive to murder him was a mystery to her.

It was seven months before the accused were brought to trial. Their appearance in the dock did not stand in their favor. Neither seemed to have much hope of an acquittal. The father showed more courage than the son—a courage that was naturally assumed as a determination to brave out the sin. Richard seemed entirely broken down. The father listened eagerly to the evidence; the son seemed lost in despondence. Whether this was from a sense of guilt or from having lived so long contemplating his probable end on the scaffold no one of course knew.

The trial was of short duration, there being no evidence on either side more than has been given here. Avis bore up bravely, encouraging them with her presence in court, but it is doubtful if her sympathy was not rather an injury than a benefit, for every one thought the father and brother the more detestable in contrast with so fine a girl. The jury were out a long while. Then they returned and said they could not agree. The judge, who in his charge had virtually shown them that there was a clear case against the accused men, sent them back. In three hours the jury returned a verdict of guilty.

When a few weeks later Richard Bradbury under the influence of his spiritual adviser confessed that he and his father had followed Barnes, murdered him and sunk his body out at sea the splendor of the jury's decision was pronounced upon by every one. Barnes had been killed, and no one but the Bradburys could have killed him. This was plain to the jury, who had had the evidence to act upon although supported only by circumstantial evidence.

All this was very satisfactory to the good people of that part of New England, and the deadly record that had been that Avis, having suffered the loss of her lover, must now look to such a horrible way for father and brother, who, she finally persuaded herself, were innocent. Indeed, she clung to this belief even after her brother had confessed.

Then a strange thing happened. An American ship came into port from Liverpool, and the first man to come ashore was John Barnes.

On the night he had left his sweetheart he set out for a neighboring town. A British ship was lying in the offing, and as he walked in the moonlight he heard the sound of oars. A boat came ashore near him. Its crew jumped out on to the beach and laid violent hands on him. He was a stout fellow and broke away, was caught on a dune and after a desperate struggle borne to the boat and subdued by the British ship's crew. He had been captured by a press gang.

A conference of officers, placing the man who had returned to life at their head, went to the jail and demanded the release of the prisoners. They were immediately set at liberty. Then all united in the Bradburys' home, where, after witnessing a joyful meeting between his lover and the released prisoners with Avis, they brought forward a person and announced that the wedding to take place at once. The two men who had so narrowly escaped a death inflicted by their opposition retreated to receive Barnes into their family circle, and the ceremony proceeded.

Since that time trial by jury under the law is not considered so great a boon as formerly by the people of these parts.

Those charitable institutions to whom the property was left in case the cousins failed to comply with the conditions arrayed themselves for a sturdy fight Hale proposed and was accepted by the girl he had been attentive to, and with Miss Geddes' fiance there were four people interested in the will being broken.

The fight was a long one. There was a decision against the cousins, and they appealed to a higher court. The decision was reversed, and the institutions fighting for their rights appealed. By this time a good deal of money had been spent, most of which came out of the estate. Besides, while the case was in court the property could not be sold, and some of it depreciated in value. David Hale was very much worried. Indeed, his nerves were on edge, and Miss Merritt found that his condition affected her own health. They had many spats, and their engagement was broken and renewed several times. Miss Geddes was made unhappy by the fear that Mr. Niles, who when he offered his hand had been perfectly satisfied to take her without fortune, would in case she was deprived of her inheritance leave her in the lurch. Hale considered his cousin to blame for the situation and conceived an antipathy for her which she heartily returned. So these four people were made miserable by Miss Olivia Hale's effort to manage her property after her death.

The business before the upper courts was voluminous, and decisions were delayed. The cousins' lawyers informed them that they had little hope that the case would ultimately be won. They also told them that if they were disposed to fulfill the conditions of the will they might take advantage of an ambiguity in its wording to do so.

This proved the most unfortunate turn in the whole affair. Instead of instantly declining this proposition they took it under consideration. Hale and Niles both seemed to lean to the side that this would be a common sense solution of the problem. At any rate, they talked or acted in a way that induced the two girls to break their engagements. Hale and Miss Geddes, being free, resolved to take the lawyers' advice and agree to comply with the terms of the will.

This furnished a new legal complication, which not only prolonged the case in court, but added greatly to the expense. The cousins seldom met, and when they did they quarreled. Miss Merritt, who had spent several years in misery while engaged to Hale, was broken in health and went to a sanitarium. Niles married a wealthy girl he cared nothing for and was divorced within eighteen months. Miss Geddes, who had loved him devotedly, was broken hearted.

And still the case dragged on.

Finally one day a decision was announced. It was decided, first, that the cousins had not complied with the terms of the will within the specified time and could not inherit by doing so afterward; second, the property was to go to the charitable institutions specified.

Then came the casting of the accounts. Lawyers' fees and court fees were set down at $300,000; depreciation of real estate, $200,000; accumulated interest against the estate, $75,000, and shrinkage of stocks and bonds during a financial crisis, $400,000, leaving $25,000 to go to five institutions, or $5,000 each.

When Miss Olivia Hale died four young people had every prospect of a happy domestic life. Had she simply died without laying plans to manage her property after her death, leaving it where she liked without conditions, she would at least have done no harm and might have done much good. As it was, she wrecked four lives, and the only real benefit she conferred was on the lawyers.

Niles was so disappointed and injured at the outcome that he is today little better than an outcast. Miss Merritt died in the sanitarium. Niles lives at a club. He would like to marry again, but the girl he wants won't marry a divorced man. Miss Geddes has long ago passed out of this life, but she will never marry any one but Niles and has become a sour old maid. Not a child of those of the third generation to whom the testator intended her wealth should go has been born.

AN ODD CASE.

By EVELYN WITWORTH.

[Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.]

In the summer of 1812 in a New England coast town John Burnes and Avis Bradbury stood on a beach one night talking in an excited undertone. Burnes was speaking.

"I tell you, Avis, they're going to murder me. I was told that your father stated at the tavern that our marriage should never take place, and your brother Dick said he was going to shoot me on sight."

"Their threats don't mean anything, John, or they would not have made them thus publicly. They know you have no means and are opposed to you on that account. But that's all. They will never raise a finger to hurt you, and when we are once married they will drop their objections."

This dialogue was heard by one who was lying on the sands screened from the couple by some sagebushes. John Burnes was not seen nor heard of by any one in the town, including his sweetheart, the next day or the next. Had he gone away he would certainly have communicated with Avis, but she was as ignorant of his whereabouts as the others. Steven Bradbury, her father, and Richard, her brother, having threatened him, were looked upon with suspicion.

Then one day a boy brought in John's coat from a neighboring town. It was found on a dune torn almost to shreds and covered with spots of blood.

The two Bradburys were arrested and thrown into prison charged with the murder of John Burnes. There was plenty of evidence against them of a circumstantial nature. They had threatened Burnes openly, and the man who had heard the dialogue between John and Avis was ready to testify that John feared for his life at their hands. But since there was no direct evidence, since it was not even known positively that Burnes was dead, the authorities wisely resolved to wait. Meanwhile the father and son languished in prison. Avis felt assured that they were innocent; that her lover had met with foul play at the hands of some one else. But who could have had a motive to murder him was a mystery to her.

It was seven months before the accused were brought to trial. Their appearance in the dock did not stand in their favor. Neither seemed to have much hope of an acquittal. The father showed more courage than the son—a courage that was naturally attributed to a determination to brazen out the sin. Richard seemed entirely broken down. The father listened eagerly to the evidence; the son seemed lost in despondence. Whether this came from a sense of guilt or from having lived so long contemplating his probable end on the scaffold no one of course knew.

The trial was of short duration, there being no evidence on either side more than has been given here. Avis bore up bravely, encouraging them with her presence in court, but it is doubtful if her sympathy was not rather an injury than a benefit, for every one thought the father and brother the more detestable in contrast with so fine a girl. The jury were out a long while. Then they returned and said they could not agree. The judge, who in his charge had virtually shown them that there was a clear case against the accused men, sent them back. In three hours the jury returned a verdict of guilty.

When a few weeks later Richard Bradbury under the influence of his spiritual adviser confessed that he and his father had followed Burnes, murdered him and sunk his body out at sea the splendor of the jury system was pronounced upon by every one. Burnes had been killed, and no one but the Bradburys could have killed him. This was plain to the jury, who had had the courage to act upon it though supported only by circumstantial evidence.

All this was very satisfactory to the good people of that part of New England, and the only regret they had was that Avis, having suffered the loss of her lover, must now lose in such a horrible way her father and brother, who, she fondly persuaded herself, were innocent. Indeed, she clung to this belief even after her brother had confessed.

Then a strange thing happened. An American ship came into port from Liverpool, and the first man to come ashore was John Burnes.

On the night he had left his sweetheart he set out for a neighboring town. A British ship was lying in the offing, and as he walked in the moonlight he heard the sound of oars. A boat came ashore near him. Its crew jumped out on to the beach and laid violent hands on him. He was a stout fellow and broke away, was caught on a dune and after a desperate struggle borne to the boat and afterward to the British ship. He had been captured by a press gang.

A concourse of citizens, placing the man who had returned to life at their head, went to the jail and demanded the release of the prisoners. They were immediately set at liberty. Then all moved to the Bradburys' home, where, after witnessing the joyful meeting between the lovers and the released prisoners with Avis, they brought forward a parson and demanded that the wedding take place at once. The two men who had so narrowly escaped a death incurred by their opposition consented to receive Burnes into their family circle, and the ceremony proceeded.

Since that time trial by jury under the law is not considered so great a boon as formerly by the people of those parts.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE LIBRARIAN.

Editor Daily News: The Library is very grateful for Iona Moore, donated by Mrs. M. Huston. Now that Daytona is so rapidly filling with people, I wish to make a plea for the Library. Will those who have homes or houses in charge kindly look about for stray library books. Well if they have been missing for some time and the children would be very glad if someone would return.

If some of our winter visitors have brought with them interesting books which they do not care to carry home they will find the Public Library a safe deposit for them and they will confer a favor on the reading public.

A Rest Room would be arranged very easily if some of our friends would join in a money donation, which would enable the officers of the Library to purchase a couch, a table and three or four easy chairs for the little used east room.

Many ladies come in and wish to rest after an unusual walk and I am sure a little effort among our winter guests would result in a room of which we may well be proud.

The encouraging news comes to friends here through Miss Ella Tremain at Mt. Dora that her mother, Mrs. R. C. Tremain, is steadily improving. COMMUNICATION FROM THE LIBRARIAN.

Editor Daily News: The Library is very grateful for Intra Muros, donated by Mrs. M. Huston. Now that Daytona is so rapidly filling with guests, I wish to make a plea for the library. Will those who have homes or houses in charge kindly look about for stray library books. "Walled In" has been missing for some time and the librarian would be very glad if someone would return it. If some of our winter visitors have brought with them interesting books which they do not care to carry home they will find the Public Library a safe deposit for them and they will confer a favor on the reading public.

A Rest Room could be arranged very easily if some of our friends would join in a money donation, which would enable the officers of the Library to purchase a couch, a table and three or four easy chairs for the little used east room.

Many ladies come in and wish to rest after an unusual walk and I am sure a little effort among our winter guests would result in a room of which we may well be proud.
